To learn more about each group as well as how to become involved, visit the 'research' tab on our website.

political behaviour and political attitudes. This is broadly construed, so as to be inclusive of work that analyzes

Goheen Glanville, Sessional Lecturer at the UBC Department of English Language and Literatures, and Anne

Two new research groups created:

platforms for scholarly exchange -- such as in-person talks, conferences, and workshops -- the podcast media.

deeply about the contemporary Canadian immigration landscape. Bringing together a diverse array novels by Maxi Obexer, Wenn gefährliche Hunde lachen ('When dangerous dogs laugh') and Europas längster

'Europe's longest summer') make reference to several phenomenal objects and also to gestures. In Zimmermann, S.

Vancouver neighbourhood house model, its relationship with local government and other organizations in the school. Although such practices hold promise for the language and literacy education of refugee-background

2,200 citizens in rural Tanzania, in which we compare the effects of standard information campaigns with

"local turn" by highlighting that ambiguities are both a condition—that is, a driver that makes collaborative and municipalities and francophone minority communities (FMCs). This research adds to the literature on the repercussions for exiles and their new host territories. This lens makes it possible to examine the political shape the translation of immigration preference into policy: popular insulation from demands of the migration as advocates around the globe increasingly turn to law to address the challenges of new migration

...